1960s

Gene Bolles (M.D. 1963) received the Humanitarian Award from the American Association of Neurological Surgeons. The award, presented in April at the AANS annual meeting in San Francisco, recognizes Bolles' 20 years of volunteer efforts with patients in Belize, Mexico, Indonesia and Albania. Bolles resides in Longmont, Colorado, where he is a neurosurgeon with Denver Health and assistant professor of neurosurgery at the University of Colorado Health Sciences Center.

1970s

Richard T. Miyamoto (M.D. 1970) is president-elect of the American Academy of Otolaryngology - Head and Neck Surgery, as well as its foundation. His one-year term will begin in September at the organization's annual meeting in Toronto, Canada. Miyamoto is the Arilla Spence DeVault Professor and Chair of the Department of Otolaryngology - Head and Neck Surgery at the Indiana University School of Medicine in Indianapolis.

M. Margaret Knudson (M.D. 1976, Residency 1982) has been appointed vice chair for the Central American College of Surgeons Committee on Trauma for a four year term (2006-2010). Knudson is a practicing trauma surgeon at San Francisco

General Hospital and professor of surgery at the University of California-San Francisco. She is the director of the San Francisco Injury Center for Research and Prevention, one of 11 centers of excellence funded by the Center for Disease Control. Her research focuses on resuscitation from hemorrhage, coagulation disorders after trauma, the use of ultrasound in detecting injuries, and prevention of pediatric trauma. Knudson is also funded by the U.S. Army for her work in trauma training in simulation for surgery residents. She can be reached at pknudson@sfghsurg.ucsf.edu.

1980s

Michael W. Klinkner (M.D. 1980) visits Haiti on a regular basis as a health care provider with the Miami-based organization Mission to Haiti. On one trip a few years ago, Klinkner converted his group's makeshift clinic into an emergency room when a young girl in the village, Veronique, severed her Achilles' tendon after falling off her bike into a heap of metal. With limited supplies (including syringes of lidocaine provided by a dental technician in the group) and the help of other volunteers, Klinkner was able to repair her ankle on a picnic-bench-turned-operating-table in a goat pasture. On a return visit a year later, Klinkner was tending patients in that same pasture when Veronique came by on her bike to say, "Merci," and show him her fully-functioning ankle. Klinkner is a family medicine specialist at Rex Urgent Care of Cary in North Carolina. A detailed account of his experience was published by Medical Economics in November 2004, and can be read online at www.memag.com/memag/article/articleDetail.jsp?id=130914. Klinkner can be reached at Michael.Klinkner@rexhealth.com.

Lili Leavell-Hayes, M.D. (Residency 1990), was appointed president of the Hoosier State Medical Association for 2005-06. After completing her anesthesiology residency at the U-M, she practiced at Methodist Hospital Inc./Clarian Health Partners in Indianapolis, Indiana, and was a member of the board of directors there for eight years. Leavell-Hayes has been recognized in Who's Who in American Physicians, Who's Who in Outstanding Americans, and received the Physician's Recognition Award each year from 1996-2003. She is also the inventor of U.S. Patent #5,674,193, an oral/nasal gastric drainage kit. She resides in Indianapolis with her three children and can be reached at lalmd1010@aol.com.

Daniel Weiner (M.D. 1993) is a pulmonologist at the Children's Hospital of Philadelphia, where he serves as medical director of the Pulmonary Function Laboratory and as director of the Pediatric Pulmonary Training Program. He resides in the Philadelphia area with his wife, Aviva Katz, M.D. (Residency 1992), and their children, Gabriel, Sam, Channah and Shoshana. ➤

Lives Lived

Robert M. Heywood, M.D. (Residencies 1959 and 1960), 78, died December 31, 2005. Heywood graduated from Oshkosh High School in Wisconsin in 1945 and served in the Navy before graduating from the University of Wisconsin-Madison in 1950. He received his medical degree from George Washington Medical School in 1954, spent the following two years interning at the U.S. Naval hospitals in Bethesda, Maryland, and Long Beach, California, then completed his residencies in internal medicine and allergy at the U-M. Upon completion of his medical training, Heywood accepted a position at the Marshfield Clinic in Wisconsin as an internist-allergist and served as associate clinical professor of internal medicine at the University of Wisconsin Medical School. He is survived by his wife of 52 years, Meda; children, Chris, Craig, Brian and Anne; and 10 grandchildren.

Harvey D. Lynn, M.D. (M.D. 1936) of Scottsdale, Arizona, died on September 12, 2005, at the age of 93. After receiving his undergraduate and medical degrees from the University of Michigan, Lynn completed his residency in obstetrics and gynecology at the University of Chicago. In the 1940s, Lynn and his two brothers, David (M.D. 1931) and Bernard (a U-M Dental School alumnus) founded the Lynn Clinic and Lynn Hospital in Lincoln Park, Michigan. Lynn served on the staffs of Oakwood, Harper and Hutzler hospitals as well as Children's Hospital of Michigan during his career, and was associate professor of obstetrics and gynecology at Wayne State University. He was a Founding Fellow of the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, a fellow of the American Geriatrics Society and a member of the American Association of Gynecologic Laparoscopists, the Pan American Cancer Cytology Society and the University of Tennessee Obstetrics and Gynecologic Society. Lynn is survived by his wife of 64 years, Marcia, his children, Charles and Frederick, and a grandson, Jeffrey. Frederick says, "I have read that, if it can be said that there is one defining characteristic of a great doctor, that characteristic is intellectual curiosity. By that standard and others, my father was a great physician."

Eugene McDonough Jr., M.D. (Residency 1959), 75, of Dedham, Massachusetts, died on November 30, 2005, of amyotrophic lateral sclerosis, or Lou Gehrig's disease. McDonough attended Harvard College and Tufts Medical School, was an intern at Boston City Hospital, and served three years in the U.S. Navy Medical Corps. Upon completion of his oncology training, he joined his father's West Roxbury, Massachusetts, practice — a small office attached to the family home — and eventually inherited the practice and many of his father's patients. McDonough made house calls until his health prevented him from doing so, and worked out of Faulkner Hospital, Mount Auburn Hospital and the former New England Deaconess Hospital when his patients' illnesses required hospital facilities. He is survived by his wife, Ingrid, and son, Eugene.

Richard B. Michelson, M.D. (M.D. 1951), 78, of Kansas City, Missouri, died December 6, 2005. Michelson was born in Detroit and graduated from Bay City Central High School as co-valedictorian. He completed his undergraduate and medical degrees at the U-M, then served as a lieutenant in the Navy Medical Corps in Norfolk, Virginia, before returning to Michigan. He was a family practitioner and obstetrician for 20 years in Flint, delivering 3,200 babies, and served as chief deputy medical examiner of Genesee County for 18 years. At age 47, Michelson enrolled in the U-M School of Public Health, earning a master's degree in 1976 and becoming board certified in general preventive medicine. In 1980, he relocated to Missouri where he was clinical associate professor at both the University of Missouri-Kansas City and the University of Kansas Medical School. He served on numerous medical boards and associations throughout his career, including 10 years as medical director of Blue Cross Blue Shield of Kansas City. He was preceded in death by his wife, Barbara Ann Jacoby, in 1984, and is survived by five children, seven granddaughters and his companion of 13 years, Barbara Katz.

John Cutler O'Loughlin, M.D. (Residency 1954), 81, died October 25, 2005, at his home in Abilene, Texas, from complications of leukemia. O'Loughlin graduated from East High School in Salt Lake City, Utah, in 1941, and served in World War II. After the war, he graduated from Harvard and then from the Columbia College of Physicians and Surgeons, and completed his medical residency at the U-M and his neurosurgical residency at Dartmouth Medical School. He practiced family medicine in Jal, New Mexico, from 1955-1961 and practiced neurosurgery in Abilene from 1966-1996. O'Loughlin is survived by his wife, Trina, eight children, 13 grandchildren and five great-grandchildren. m

IN THE LAST ISSUE OF Medicine at Michigan:

In the fall 2005 issue, in the article "Coming Back to Medicine at Michigan" on page 51, we pictured outgoing Medical Center Alumni Society Board member Jeffrey Clark (M.D. 1982) and misidentified him as newly-elected Board member Lonnie Joe Jr. (M.D. 1978). Our apologies.

MCAS Hall of Honor Gains 30 New Members

The MCAS Hall of Honor was unveiled during the University of Michigan Medical School Sesquicentennial Celebration in 2000. At that time, 76 medical professionals — selected after an extensive review of hundreds of physicians' records — were chosen as the inaugural inductees, with plans to elect additional honorees every five years. The 2000 selection committee, headed by George W. Morley (M.D. 1949, Residency 1954), set the parameters for induction: Each nominee had to be an outstanding scientific contributor, a superb educator or a highly regarded individual in a long leadership role; each had to have ties to the U-M, University Hospital or the Medical School; and each had to have a profound influence on their specialized area of interest and expertise.

This year, March 16 marked the second induction ceremony in the Towsley Center, during which 30 new plaques, each presenting the story of a distinguished member of the U-M medical community, were added to the Medical Center Alumni Society Hall of Honor. MCAS president James Wasco (M.D. 1966) welcomed the new honorees and family members, and selection committee member Timothy Laing (M.D. 1981, Residency 1984) gave a brief history of the Hall of Honor. Dean Allen Lichter (M.D. 1972) remarked on the accomplishments of each honoree, and presented each with an award commemorating their induction.

Robert Bartlett (M.D. 1963) was a member of the 2000 selection committee, working closely with Morley (an inductee this year), and chaired the second committee which selected the 2006 honorees. This year's list includes the Medical School's first female faculty member, a former dean and three Nobel Prize winners. m
